Frequently Asked Questions

Question 1 – When will the new range be available for sale?

Answer 1 – Memshield 3 will be released for sale in two phases. 125A type 'A' & type 'B' boards and associated devices will be launched 3rd November. 250A high load boards will be available at the end of November.

Question 2 – Will the existing range of Circuit Protection Devices fit into this new enclosure platform?

Answer 2 – The existing range of Circuit Protection Devices will not fit into the new enclosure platform as the size profile is different. There is no forward or backward compatibility between Memshield 2 and Memshield 3 boards or devices.

Question 3 – Will the existing range of Circuit protection devices continue to be available for projects already planned and to serve our installed base?

Answer 3 – We forecast significant demand for the existing Memshield 2 devices for sometime into the future and have therefore put in place a manufacturing strategy to meet this demand.

When demand falls we will make it an Aftermarket product and continue to supply spares for many years to come as we have for the Memshield 1 device range which is now more than 13 years old

Question 4 – When will we stop supplying the current Memshield 2 Distribution boards?

Answer 4 – Our plan is to start withdrawing the existing Memshield 2 Distribution board from general sale early in 2010, but advance notice will be given.

Question 5 – Will Eaton accept stock returns for Memshield 2 products?

Answer 5 – Distributors already have the ability to return stock under the existing commercial policy and this includes Memshield 2 items. We anticipate that the levels of returns will be minimal, due to the pull through demand for Memshield 2 in the market place.

We will be working closely with our Distributors to manage the introduction and transition to the new Memshield 3 range.

Question 6 – Why is Eaton changing such a successful range of products?

Answer 6 – Memshield 2 is regarded as the Benchmark for MCB Distribution Boards in the UK and has earned a strong reputation for meeting today's electrical sub-distribution needs.

However the product and manufacturing technologies are now 15 years old and Eaton has looked to future market requirements to develop an innovative new enclosure platform on which to deliver new sub distribution solutions for managing electrical power. The new device platform will facilitate product innovation in the future.

Question 7 – Will the RCBO pod fit the new range of MCB's?

Answer 7 – No, there will be no pod option in the new range of MCB's, but the Memshield 2 RCBO pod will continue to be available for after market applications. The pod concept has delivered value to customers by making late adaptation of the MCB in to an RCBO possible. However, the solution is costly to manufacture and has a large footprint, which limits cabling space in the board. As RCBO's become more popular, Eaton's goal is to compliment the new RCBO range with a lower cost; compact sized range of RCBO's.

Question 8 – Will all product variants be available at the launch on 2nd November?

Answer 8 – The launch will be phased, to accommodate development and testing programmes and therefore the initial introduction will focus on the 125A type 'A' & type 'B' boards. This board is also suitable for 250A application in sizes 18 way and 24 way TPN and will cover the majority of applications. The High load 250A board represents a new concept in MCB Distribution board design and will be introduced at the end of November.

MEM Memshield 3 Distribution boards and protective devices

This UK Price List also includes a cross reference between the old Memshield 2 Distribution Boards/ protective devices and the new Memshield 3 Distribution Boards/protective devices.

Prices contained herein supersede and take precedence over all previously published information, effective for all goods purchased within the UK on or after 15th October 2009.
